

NEW ABSTRACT

A method of encoding a multi-channel signal having first and second signal components includes determining a set of filter parameters a prediction filter such that the prediction filter provides an estimate of the second signal component when receiving the first signal component as an input. The multi-channel signal is represented as the first signal component and the set of filter parameters. A corresponding decoding method and arrangements for encoding and decoding multi-channel signals are also provided.